With the impact of Covid, the global economy has just undergone the greatest downturn since the Great Depression.

Recovery is occurring spectacularly in some nations, including China and more recently, the United States, kicked on by the massive double stimulus of the Biden Administration.

Other economies, still in lockdown, are struggling under the impacts of the virus. What's the prognosis for the global economy at this critical juncture?

Is recovery likely to be sustainable, even, fair? What lessons might be learned and applied to global economic governance, including coordinated action by the G20 under Italy's leadership this year?

Dr Keyu Jin is a Chinese economist, Associate Professor of Economics at the London School of Economics and a World Economic Forum Young Global Leader, specialising in international macroeconomics and the Chinese economy.

Dr Lawrence (Larry) Summers is the Charles W. Eliot Professor and President Emeritus at Harvard. He was Secretary of the Treasury for President Clinton and the Director of the National Economic Council for President Obama.

Both Larry Summers and Keyu Jin participated in the Global Foundation's 2018 Rome Roundtable, held in the Casino Pio at the Vatican and also at the Bank of Italy.

Keyu Jin has also contributed to our 2020 online Rome Roundtable and addressed an Australian audience of young leaders during her visit in 2019.
